For every word that is spoken Behind it lies a reason Just like all the changes That come with each new season.

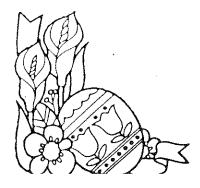

Words are spoken so carelessly By you and also myself, We use them as a powerful tool For hurting someone else.

This game called "words" is painful And will affect how someone feels For its like a wound thats very deep It scars, but never heals.

And the game of words goes on Until someone discovers There isn't room for love anymore But only for hurting each other.

And the one that finally sees this Turns and walks away Cashing in the love once shared Was the price they had to pay.

So think before you begin this game You'll be hurt before you're through Because its hard to realize the damage That a single word can do.
